Loammi Baldwin, years before the Revolution, cut sodas from a wild apple tree near Wilmington, Mass., and in five years surprised his neighbors with a crop of red apples of remarkable favor. His name was given to the apple by common consent, and when the original tree died the site was marked by a monument. Since Loammi Baldwin found the wild apple tree that bears his name scores of different varieties of apples have been produced. But the Baldwin more than holds its ground among people who judge fruit by its flavor rather than by size.

A town character who had been in trouble with the police many times was arrested recently on a minor criminal charge. The arresting officer was amazed when the fellow appeared in police court with a lawyer prepared to make a defense. His case was called and the judge asked "Prisoner, are you guilty or not guilty?" "Let my lawyer plead not guilty for me, judge," was the reply. "I ain't got the nerve."
